

Funding model not working

The Toronto Star
Tuesday, July 22, 2008
Section: Letter

Slow and steady convalescence for battered Brampton hospital, July 21

While updating CUPE's pay equity plan, I discovered the public-private partnership (P3) was short-changing hundreds of nurses and the community. We agreed that the hospital would make up the difference by paying an extra $3 million in back wages to our nurses.

When will the Ontario government's hospital supervisor Ken White come clean and admit that the P3 funding model offers only false savings and unacceptable patient care trade-offs?

Tom Baker, representative, Canadian Union of Public Employees, Toronto