During the COVID-19 pandemic, frontline workers like yourselves have gone above and beyond in order to support the public. At the height of the pandemic, we understood that we all had to make sacrifices for the greater good. But as the province reopens, we do not believe that it should only be frontline workers continuing to make sacrifices.

With Bill 195, emergency orders that were supposed to be temporary and which permitted employers to ignore sections of our collective agreements, are now extended indefinitely.

This is an extraordinary, undemocratic, and unprecedented abuse of power. Front-line workers – who helped keep us safe and delivered the critical services in a pandemic – deserve better than an attack on their legal rights.

Every Thursday you can take action to push the Ford Conservatives to do the right thing and ensure that workers have their rights restored today.

1. Print this sign and take a picture! You can text pictures to 647-953-2030 and post to social media using the hashtag #RestoreOurRights.
2. Visit www.cupe.on.ca/RestoreOurRights and take part in the e-action to send a message to Doug Ford and your MPP. Share with your colleagues and friends.
3. Send a message to your MPP on social media telling them why you need your collective agreement rights restored. Urge them to rescind Bill 195 and end the emergency orders that allow your employer to override your collective agreement.
4. Join a rally hosted by OCHU and CUPE Ontario. You can find a rally close to you by visiting www.cupe.on.ca/RestoreOurRights
