

Don't attack health care workers' collective bargaining rights

Collective bargaining in the health sector works well

Don't attack health care workers' collective bargaining rights

Collective bargaining in the health sector works well

Don't attack health care workers' collective bargaining rights

Collective bargaining in the health sector works well

Don't attack health care workers' collective bargaining rights

Collective bargaining in the health sector works well

Dear Finance Minister,

In Ontario hundreds of thousands of essential health care workers are forbidden by law from striking. In place of the right to strike they have been provided with a neutral arbitration process.

Negotiated settlements free of government interference are the best way to resolve bargaining. In the health sector interest arbitration is working well. Arbitrated settlements have been less generous than those negotiated in sectors where workers have the right to strike.

Yet your government is moving to:

- attack health care workers' ability to freely negotiate collective agreements;
- impose contracts;
- reject freely negotiated settlements;
- set ministerial mandates that will affect the delivery of services;
- take away the right to a fair interest arbitration process.

I urge you to not legislate away the right of health care workers to a fair arbitration process and to free collective bargaining.

Sincerely,

(name and address)

affix sufficient postage

TO:
The Honourable
Dwight Duncan
Ministry of Finance
7 Queen's Park Cr, 7th floor,
Toronto, ON M7A 1Y7

CAW
Local 40

Dear Finance Minister,

In Ontario hundreds of thousands of essential health care workers are forbidden by law from striking. In place of the right to strike they have been provided with a neutral arbitration process.

Negotiated settlements free of government interference are the best way to resolve bargaining. In the health sector interest arbitration is working well. Arbitrated settlements have been less generous than those negotiated in sectors where workers have the right to strike.

Yet your government is moving to:

- attack health care workers' ability to freely negotiate collective agreements;
- impose contracts;
- reject freely negotiated settlements;
- set ministerial mandates that will affect the delivery of services;
- take away the right to a fair interest arbitration process.

I urge you to not legislate away the right of health care workers to a fair arbitration process and to free collective bargaining.

Sincerely,

(name and address)

affix
sufficient
postage

TO:
The Honourable
Dwight Duncan
Ministry of Finance
7 Queen's Park Cr, 7th floor,
Toronto, ON M7A 1Y7

CAW
Local 40

Dear Finance Minister,

In Ontario hundreds of thousands of essential health care workers are forbidden by law from striking. In place of the right to strike they have been provided with a neutral arbitration process.

Negotiated settlements free of government interference are the best way to resolve bargaining. In the health sector interest arbitration is working well. Arbitrated settlements have been less generous than those negotiated in sectors where workers have the right to strike.

Yet your government is moving to:

- attack health care workers' ability to freely negotiate collective agreements;
- impose contracts;
- reject freely negotiated settlements;
- set ministerial mandates that will affect the delivery of services;
- take away the right to a fair interest arbitration process.

I urge you to not legislate away the right of health care workers to a fair arbitration process and to free collective bargaining.

Sincerely,

(name and address)

affix
sufficient
postage

TO:
The Honourable
Dwight Duncan
Ministry of Finance
7 Queen's Park Cr, 7th floor,
Toronto, ON M7A 1Y7

CAW
Local 40

Dear Finance Minister,

In Ontario hundreds of thousands of essential health care workers are forbidden by law from striking. In place of the right to strike they have been provided with a neutral arbitration process.

Negotiated settlements free of government interference are the best way to resolve bargaining. In the health sector interest arbitration is working well. Arbitrated settlements have been less generous than those negotiated in sectors where workers have the right to strike.

Yet your government is moving to:

- attack health care workers' ability to freely negotiate collective agreements;
- impose contracts;
- reject freely negotiated settlements;
- set ministerial mandates that will affect the delivery of services;
- take away the right to a fair interest arbitration process.

I urge you to not legislate away the right of health care workers to a fair arbitration process and to free collective bargaining.

Sincerely,

(name and address)

affix
sufficient
postage

TO:
The Honourable
Dwight Duncan
Ministry of Finance
7 Queen's Park Cr, 7th floor,
Toronto, ON M7A 1Y7

CAW
Local 40